Dear Mr Prieto,

I have carefully read the eulogy on Shakespeare and Mr Macdonald has also done so this morning. We feel, on consideration, that it would be advisable to print this in full rather than the small sentence which was the alternative idea. This little article seems to serve, not only as a eulogy of Shakespeare but as some explanation of the works contained in the portfolio and, if it is carefully printed should not interfere in any way with the artistic appearance of the publication.

May I say that I was greatly impressed with the whole idea and I am sure that it will greatly enhance your reputation as an artist. The attention to detail may be laborious but it is a labour of love and, if it is worth doing it is worth doing to the best of your ability.

Yours sincerely,

A. J. McNeill Reid
